The International Encyclopedia of Revolution and Protest is "a comprehensive print and electronic resource for the history of protest and revolution over the past 500 years and covers every major revolution that has altered societies or changed the course of history on a local, regional, national, and international scale.” This excellent collection is available as an e-resource and can be easily accessed by searching our online catalog. Access to the library during the week before finals and the week of finals (Nov. 30 – Dec. 11) is limited to GSU, USG, and ARCHE affiliated students, faculty and staff with their ID cards. Please check library.gsu.edu/hours for our Fall Final Exam Hours from December 4 – December 11.

Are the lower floors of the library too busy to concentrate on your work? To meet your study needs, we have designated the entire fifth floor as a quiet study area. Even in group study rooms, remember to have low volume conversations. Please be considerate of your fellow students.
