Why an undergraduate research journal?

- Promote and celebrate undergraduate research
- Give students a place to publish their work
- Show off work being done at the university – in this case at multiple universities

“I strongly believe my publication has opened doors to my academic career. I am recognized in class by my current professors in both geography and economics departments. I was in the school paper as well. I have received a lot of attention for it I have included it in application materials to graduate school and applications for job internships.”

“I feel it will greatly impact the number of doors opened for me in terms of graduate school and future jobs.”

–Students who published in the CAA Undergraduate Research Journal

Why a Consortial Journal?

- Sustainability
- Support the CAA Undergraduate Research focus
- Support academic collaboration between schools that compete in athletics

Why a Consortial Journal?

- Give students an opportunity to publish outside of their own campus publications.

“It was an opportunity to be published in a journal outside of my own university! Why would I pass that up?”

–Student who published in the CAA Undergraduate Research Journal

“I think CAA is doing a great job by having such a peer-reviewed journal with free online access. There are very little opportunities for undergraduate students to present their work. The CAA journal is therefore an extremely important resource for the type of undergraduate students that would like to take their work beyond simply class projects.”

–undergraduate student

Why online?

- Open access
 - Indexed by search engines
- Lower cost
- Easy for students to link to in portfolios

Asked if having her article published online was beneficial and if she had heard from people who read it, a student responded

“Yes! Outside of my family, even. Mainly, it was the office of university development that wanted to do a news story on my article for the website. That story got picked up by the wider internet; also, it came up when people searched my name on the WM website, and lots of those people would comment about it to me-- even if they didn't know me! The effect was a little indirect, but I feel like I've had quite a few downloads of my article, so that's pretty cool.”
