BRIDGING FOR HEALTH

IMPROVING Community Health
Through INNOVATIONS
in FINANCING

The Georgia Health Policy Center is the national coordinating center for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Bridging for Health initiative. The center works with selected states, regions, and communities that are pursuing innovations in policy, health care delivery, and financing mechanisms that improve outcomes, and rebalance and align investments in health. Examples of such innovations might include pay for success or social impact bonds, wellness trusts, and Delivery System Reform Incentive Payments (DSRIPS).

Bridging for Health focuses on:

- Innovations in Financing
- Collaboration & Collective Impact
- Health Equity

Sites will be provided:

- Technical Assistance
- Evaluation Support
- Resources for convenings, core functions, or special projects
- Opportunities for peer learning and exchange

We support and facilitate sites in developing, evaluating, and sharing their efforts to spark further innovations in financing to improve population health across the country.

OUR WORK

Communities across the nation are acting on or developing ambitious plans to change systems and structures to improve health and community wellness. We are hoping to foster connections among multiple sectors that impact health, including health care, public health, social services, business, schools, housing, and others.
